

BART

Sunday, 2 February 2020 03:33 PM

BART GAME EXPERT REPORT

Thank you for playing the BART game. Our system has analysed a significant number of your responses and produced the analysis below using our expert system reporting. The game looks at many variables, but primarily at 3 major areas outlined below. The Chart below shows your profile based on how you played the game, the way you responded and the final score that you achieved.

EMOTIONALITY AND RISK TAKING

Your game profile indicates that like most people, you have a balance between being somebody who is generally nervous and someone who is normally relaxed and calm. Whilst there may be occasions where you may feel slightly nervous, it is likely that you remain calm and feel relaxed in just as many situations. You are likely to be able to switch off after work like most people and feel just as confident as others when it comes to situations where work-related decisions have to be made. Profiles such as yours, like most people, indicate a balance between being a risky person and someone who is risk-averse.

WORK MANAGEMENT AND DECISIONS MAKING

Your game profile indicates that like most people, you have a balance between being somebody who prefers structure to their work and somebody who prefers to avoid this type of organisation to their work. Like most people, you are likely to be comfortable adapting slightly to both types of styles, however it is probable that you would not enjoy any prolonged periods of working in either extremity of behaviours. For example, having to maintain highly levels of structure most of the time, or having little or no structure and not having the opportunity to compensate for your preference.

SOCIABILITY

Your responses to the game suggest that like most people, you have a balance between being somebody who is outgoing and enjoys the company of others to being someone who is comfortable spending time alone, preferring a more reserved style. It may be on occasion that you prefer to be alone, whilst on others you enjoy meeting new people in social situations; however, it is unlikely that you will be comfortable in situations where you are spending too much time alone or spending too much time with others.

Disclaimer

This feedback and profile has been developed on the basis of the responses, which you were collected during your game play. No assessment methodology is 100% infallible. As such, there may be occasions where you may not agree entirely with its contents. We strongly recommend that you use this profile only to get an idea of what a game output report may look like during a recruitment process and nothing more. As such, Graduates First is unable to accept any responsibility for outcomes resulting from the use of this assessment, feedback and profile in any manner other than stated.